

The vision in Australia: progress, challenges and questions for the Forum

Ros Madden

Disability statistics and information have improved in the last decade in Australia. The ICF creates a platform for further and more widespread improvements. What might these improvements look like? What new information would we have? What good would it do? This paper attempts to answer these questions, and discusses the challenges to be faced in working towards the vision outlined.